Here is an excerpt from the novel:

“I remember the day I met him like it was yesterday. He was sitting in a cafe, reading a book. I was immediately drawn to him. He had a kind smile and a gentle way about him. We talked for hours that day, and I felt like I had known him my whole life. We fell in love quickly and deeply. He was everything I had ever wanted in a man. He was kind, compassionate, and intelligent. He made me laugh and he made me feel safe. I thought we would have a lifetime together.”

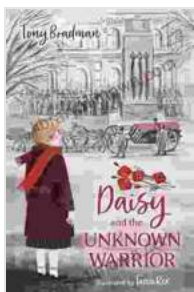

"But then the war came. He was called up to fight, and I knew that our lives would never be the same. I begged him not to go, but he said he had to do his duty. He promised he would come home to me, but I knew that there was a chance he might not.

"He was killed in action a few months later. I was devastated. I couldn't believe that he was gone. I felt like a part of me had died with him. I didn't know how I was going to go on without him.

"But then I remembered something he had said to me before he left. He said that even if he was gone, he would always be with me in my heart. And that's what I've held onto ever since. He may be gone, but he'll never be forgotten."”

Daisy and the Unknown Warrior is a must-read for anyone who has ever loved and lost, or who is searching for hope and inspiration in the face of adversity. It is a story that will stay with readers long after they finish reading it.
