As Hugo's tardiness spirals out of control, it begins to take a toll on his relationships. His girlfriend, Emily, grows tired of his excuses and missed dates. His colleagues at work lose patience with his unreliable nature. And his friends distance themselves from the man who can never seem to make it on time.

In a moment of desperation, Hugo seeks the help of a therapist. Together, they embark on a journey of self-discovery, exploring the underlying reasons for Hugo's tardiness. As Hugo delves into his past and examines his relationship with time, he uncovers a complex web of fear, insecurity, and procrastination.

Through a series of poignant and often humorous episodes, Hugo learns to confront his demons and take responsibility for his actions. He discovers the importance of time management, the value of punctuality, and the power of self-discipline.
