Literary Luminaries of the Lost Generation

The 1920s witnessed the emergence of the Lost Generation, a group of American writers who came of age during World War I. Hemingway's iconic novel "The Sun Also Rises" captures the disillusionment and restless spirit of the Lost Generation. Fitzgerald's masterpiece "The Great Gatsby" explores themes of love, wealth, and the American Dream. Stein's experimental writing, such as her novel "The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas," challenged traditional literary norms and influenced generations of writers.

Fashion also played a significant role in shaping the unique aesthetic of the 1920s. Coco Chanel's "little black dress" revolutionized women's fashion, while Art Deco and Cubist influences were evident in architecture, furniture, and jewelry.
